ARTICLE I NAME AND PURPOSE

1. Name. The name of the organization shall be Association of Academic Survey Research Organizations. The short form of the name shall be AASRO.
2. Purpose. The purpose of AASRO is to facilitate mutual support among member organizations in the following ways:
 - Promote excellence and integrity in the conduct of survey research;
 - Help academic survey centers advance the research, educational and service goals of their respective colleges and universities by providing or promoting formal and informal education, training, and center review for effective organization and administration of academic survey research organizations;
 - Promote knowledge sharing among member centers;
 - Ensure the ability of academic survey centers to educate the next generation of survey researchers by advancing the educational and research role of survey research organizations across diverse university structures; and
 - Advance society and the social and behavioral sciences by promoting the values of academic survey research: methodological innovation, scientifically-grounded data collection practices, and public dissemination of important survey research results.

ARTICLE II MEMBERSHIP

1. Membership Qualifications. AASRO is an association of academic survey research organizations, not individuals. Member organizations will meet the following criteria:
 - the organization is part of an academic institution (a university or college);
 - the director of the organization reports to a university or college official;
 - the organization's primary function is the design and implementation of scientific surveys that are intended to produce generalizable knowledge;
 - the organization maintains a sustained physical and administrative infrastructure; and
 - the organization's mission extends beyond providing infrastructure for a student practicum or one ongoing survey.

Organizations that do not meet the above criteria may request membership by submitting a petition in writing to the Executive Committee's Membership Coordinator detailing what criteria they may not meet and why this should not preclude membership. The Executive Committee can allow membership by majority vote of all members of the Committee.

2. Voting. Each member organization will have one (1) vote in AASRO officer elections and all matters to be voted on by the full membership. Each member organization's voting delegate must be employed by that member organization. Unless otherwise specified by the member organization, or unless a member of the survey organization is serving on the AASRO Executive Committee, the voting delegate will be the director. If someone at the member organization is serving on the Executive Committee, that person will be the organization's voting delegate for the duration of that member's tenure on the Executive committee.

3. Duration of Membership. The membership period is for one (1) calendar year, from January 1st through December 31st. The membership of any member organization may be terminated by the Executive Committee for not paying dues.
4. List of Members. It shall be the duty of the Secretary/Membership Coordinator to maintain a list of current AASRO member organizations. The current list will be available on request by any member. A directory of members will be kept on the AASRO website and will be updated no less often than annually.
5. Emeritus Members. Recognizing that AASRO is an association of organizations rather than individuals, a special category of nonvoting individual "Emeritus" members, is nonetheless recognized as important to the continuity and health of the association. Specifically, individuals who have retired or left employment from an academic survey research organization for which they previously served as Director or Associate Director, or otherwise served as the organization's AASRO representative, can apply for status as an Emeritus Member of AASRO. Acceptance of applications for Emeritus Membership will be based on a vote of the Executive Committee. Emeritus Members are entitled to remain as participants on AASRO's member listserv and to attend Annual Meetings, to the extent that space is available.
